This report provides an overview of the acquisitions, exhibitions, and educational programs presented during the past fiscal year at the Montgomery Museum of Fine Arts. It also documents the generous donations of artwork and contributions of financial support from a broad variety of donor sources during the period October 1, 2007 through September 30, 2008.

As documented during 2007, under the leadership of the Board of Trustees, and as carried out through the efforts of our senior staff members, the Museum created and adopted a new strategic plan with the expert assistance of corporate planners Tom Thompson & Associates. Several goals were outlined in the plan around the premise of maximizing Museum attendance, participation, membership and funding through “developing a greater appreciation for the quality of the MMFA and its value to all residents of the greater Montgomery area.” Since a website is often one of the first interactions a person will have with a brand, it serves as a key communications piece and a vital first step in working to maximize our growth potential. In order for the MMFA to grow and sustain a strong brand, it must portray it not only in person, but also online.

We anticipate the completion of a new website by February of 2009. The website will include such features as a user-friendly search of the Museum’s collection, a press room for the media, special event menus and price sheets, and an interactive educational section. All visitors will be able to sign up to volunteer, register for studio classes, schedule a tour, and book a special event online with the new site as well.

In addition, the Museum felt it was imperative to include a blog on our new website. The blog will provide regular entries of commentary, descriptions of events, or other material such as graphics. and video on happenings at the Museum. It will combine text, images, and graphics that, most importantly, will allow readers to leave comments, developing conversations between the Museum and its publics about our Museum, art, and Montgomery. It is our hope that this new feature will encourage even more visitors to the Museum.

After the first phase of the site is built, the architecture will be in place for us to continue to expand it in the years to come. The future phases of the site include plans for e-commerce (or the buying and selling of products over the internet for the Museum Shop), personalized web pages for our members, and even an intranet to enable the Museum’s staff to communicate more efficiently internally.

With the injection of social media tools such as MySpace, Facebook, Twitter, and others, people now have the ability and desire to easily share with each other, and to discover people, places and things that are of interest to them more quickly than ever before. Not only is it important for the Museum to understand the technologies and tools that enable social media, it’s essential that we analyze and understand the shift in how information is absorbed and distributed and integrate those things into our new website. We are looking forward to the building of our new site and hope that, with it, we can continue to grow and expand in new ways, as the future of communications evolves, and continue to use it to capitalize on our success.

Despite a national economic downturn, individuals and businesses in the River Region strongly supported their Museum during its 78th year. The MMFA has been a significant tool in attracting new businesses to south central Alabama and is the area’s premier source of visual arts education.

Long-time Corporate Partner Bruce Reid chaired the 2008 Corporate Partner Campaign, successfully renewing existing business donors of more than $2,500 and soliciting new corporate support for the Museum’s exhibition, education and acquisition programs. Direct mail campaigns swelled the ranks of Corporate Members, General Members and Patrons. Membership chair Polly Hardegree challenged each member of the Board of Trustees to acquire three new members for this year’s peer-to-peer solicitation. Jane Barganier again led the Director’s Circle Committee to success in adding new members to the Museum’s major donor society.

Art Auction 2008 profit exceeded $127,000, the fifth auction under the leadership of Pat Wanglie and her talented committee yielding support to the exhibition, acquisition, and education programs of the MMFA. Merrill Lynch has been the Art Auction sponsor since the first event in 1992. In addition to the Art Auction proceeds, nearly $20,000 was donated by event attendees to acquire a cast glass sculpture by North Carolina artist Rick Beck.

Museum members took ARtrips to Atlanta and Fairhope. Great bands, interesting exhibitions, door prizes and wine tastings continued to draw people to the Museum on the First Friday of every month except July.
CURATORIAL

- The Sonja Blomdahl exhibition, Sonja Blomdahl Incalmo/Glass, continues to travel to museums around the United States until 2009.

- A recent acquisition of over 160 prints by the German Expressionist artist Hans Grohs (1892–1981) was painstakingly evaluated, documented, and entered into the Museum’s collection database. Their conditions were assessed; they were photographed and then placed in new mats and storage.

- The Museum received a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts to fund research into specific American works on paper from the permanent collection. This research, which will be carried out by guest scholars to augment the work and expertise of the Museum staff, will form a significant contribution to the Museum’s projected online database of collections documentation.

- A number of loans to exhibitions organized by other institutions in the past year were approved and executed. These loans served to promote knowledge of the quality of the Museum’s permanent collection and contributed to ongoing scholarship in American art. These loans were:

EDUCATION

• For the ARTWORKS Corridor exhibitions this year, nearly 700 entries were received from 15 public and private schools and three universities in the tri-county area. A committee of Museum curators, artists, and art teachers selected a total of 165 works of art by kindergarten to college-aged students for the four different ARTWORKS Corridor exhibitions. The Corridor exhibitions reinterpreted the themes of major exhibitions on view in the Museum. Figures in Action (October through November) animated the hallway with action figures in the style of William H. Johnson’s works on paper. Things We Never Met (December through March) featured designs for new household objects and appliances, in connection with the functional objects displayed in the American Streamlined Design: The World of Tomorrow exhibition. Humorous interpretations of well-known works of art from the Museum’s permanent collection filled the corridor for the exhibition Hue, You, and Babar (March through June), in relation to the exhibition Babar’s Museum of Art. For the exhibition Impressions of America, (June through October), a visual feast of scenes and landscapes in the United States greeted visitors to the corridor, in connection with the exhibition American Impressionism: Paintings from The Phillips Collection.

• The Museum purchased six works of art from the corridor exhibitions, adding to the permanent student art collection.

• Studio classes for children (ages two to 13) and adults (ages 14 and older) were very popular, with a total of 1,556 participants during the year. The Toddler Tales and Crafts, weekly After School Art, and summer Art Camps filled up quickly, with a waiting list of hopeful students. For five busy weeks during the summer, the Museum studios were filled with 88 young artists creating ceramics, drawings, paintings, and multi-media works of art. Each art camp ended on Friday afternoon with a special exhibition of the students’ work, reception for the families and friends, and many smiling faces as the students proudly displayed their creations!

Classes for adults included drawing and painting workshops led by well known regional and national artists, series of stained glass and fused glass classes, silver jewelry design, and even a twilight photography workshop.

• The popular ArtTalk and ArtWalk programs continued, with as many as 20 area artists bringing their work for friendly feedback and critiques at ArtTalk every other month during the year. For the ArtWalk program, participants visited the studios of John Phillips, Diddy Vucovich, Marguerite Edwards, Wendy Slaton, Steven Cappelli, and Cathy Chambers. Following the studio visits, the participants toured related Museum exhibitions and learned about special techniques from each artist in hands-on lessons at the Museum.

Yousuf Karsh (1908-2002); and Two Different Worlds: Jun Kaneko and American Impressionism, in connection with the exhibition of large scale ceramics by Jun Kaneko and the exhibition American Impressionism: Paintings from The Phillips Collection.

• Several teachers brought art into their classrooms by checking out the traveling art suitcases.

• In conjunction with the exhibition W. H. Johnson’s World on Paper, the Booker T. Washington High School’s dance theatre brought to life the vibrations and rhythms of the Harlem Renaissance through a unique theatrical dance presentation in November. Over 600 students from area schools attended the three free dance performances, followed by guided tours of the exhibition.

• Summer Arts Sampler was a very popular family event on the evening of June 19, with 160 people in attendance. Participants enjoyed a delicious buffet, explored the exhibitions, talked with Mississippi artist Laquita Thompson about her unique prints, had their picture taken, decorated frames, made “frankenpets” from recycled stuffed animal parts with Atlanta artist Katy DeMent, and watched the dramatic art of Raku pottery as Birmingham artist Wade Oliver fired their glazed pots.

• More than 7,000 people in the community participated in outreach efforts by the education staff, docents, and outreach teachers this year. Art in the Afternoon, the Museum’s outreach program created for community centers in the city’s Weed and Seed target areas, offered after school visual arts classes to more than 100 students at three centers: Goode Street Community Center, Jubilee Community Center, and Davis Elementary School. Art teachers sent by the Museum taught the students new techniques in drawing, painting, ceramics, and sculpture. Homer Johnson, a visiting artist from Tuskegee, taught unique seven-week sessions at Jubilee Community Center in the winter and spring and helped students carve and paint their own African-inspired wooden masks. In June, 70 students from the participating centers had an exhibition of their artwork at the Armory Learning Arts Center. During the summer, the outreach art classes were also offered for six weeks at the West End Boys and Girls Club. Once in every session during the year all the students came for a field trip to the Museum, to view first hand the works of art they had studied and to create a special art project in the studios.

• The Museum hosted the American Streamlined Design: The World of Tomorrow Symposium on February 15, 2008. The day-long symposium, offered in conjunction with the exhibition, attracted 104 participants, including many local architects. David Hanks, Curator, The Liliane and David M. Stewart Program for Modern Design, Montreal, co-curator of the exhibition American Streamlined Design: The World of Tomorrow, and co-author of the catalogue, opened the program with his lecture, “Streamline Modern in Architecture and Design: Architecture, Objects, and the Origins of Streamlining in Scientific Principles and in Europe.” Christopher C. Deam, designer, architect, and principal of CCD in San Francisco, delivered the keynote address, “American Idiosyncratic.” Symposium participants had the chance to enter an Airstream Trailer designed by Deam on view on the lawn adjacent to the Lowder Gallery.
• 447 people attended gallery talks and lectures at the Museum. Guest speakers included Alabama historian Mary Anne Neeley; New York writer and broadcaster Michael Lasser; long-time associate of Yousuf Karsh and curator of the Karsh estate, Jerry Fielder; and Fleischman lecturer Sue Frank of the Phillips Collection, curator of American Impressionism: Paintings from The Phillips Collection. Guest artists included painter Dale Kennington, photographer Lynn Saville, and ceramicist Jun Kaneko. Each spoke about their work in the galleries. Kennington and Kaneko delivered lectures, and Saville offered a night photography workshop.

• Montgomery Museum of Fine Arts presented “Streamlining in Everyday Objects.” Members of the Auburn University Industrial and Graphic Design faculty presented a display of student projects, and Karen Rogers, Associate Dean of the College of Architecture, Design, and Construction, moderated a panel discussion.

• The Museum offered four Senior Citizens Socials in conjunction with temporary exhibitions. A total of 89 individuals participated. After touring the exhibitions, seniors worked on a simple project related to the works they had seen.

• Museum Docents have been busy this year. Each year, the Museum provides free tours to the Montgomery Public School System’s (MPS) kindergarteners and third graders. 3,696 students from both MPS kindergarten and other area schools participated in the Colors of the City puppet show and Peekaboo Street tour; while 2,867 MPS third graders enjoyed a gallery tour and studio activity related to the William H. Johnson’s World on Paper and American Streamlined Design: The World of Tomorrow exhibits. Art à la Cart and Weekends at One kept both children and adults alike interested and entertained on the weekends.

• There were 17 daytime training sessions and nine evening training sessions for the Museum’s docents. Training addressed gallery teaching, tours, the permanent collection, temporary exhibitions, and the history of art. The docents also enjoyed a field trip to the Westervelt Warner Museum of American Art in Tuscaloosa.

• In addition to system-wide school tours, Museum Docents provided tours for more than 5,000 visitors – a total of over 11,500 tour participants in all! Docents provided over 2,200 service hours conducting tours.

• The docents volunteered many hours helping with other parts of the Museum’s outreach efforts, such as: visiting 28 schools to introduce third graders to the concepts and works of art they would view on their tour to the Museum; offering special art activities at the Jubilee Kidsfest, the Zoo Earthday, and Eastdale Mall Family Night; and visiting kindergarten students at 30 schools to reinforce concepts they learned during their tours at the Museum.

• Frequently requested specialized tours connecting art in the galleries with creative writing, math and science were a big hit this year. Docents and Education staff collaborated on improving the math and science tour for an inspired learning experience. Two new tours, Geometry in Art and PortraitTour were developed to expand the variety of tours available to the public. A history tour related to the Yousuf Karsh exhibition gave participants a fascinating look into the lives of many well-known 20th century personalities.
